To whom it may concern,

Our core practice is backing creators with money, power, and influence — especially women, people of color, and queer game developers.

For example, the Moonrise fund is a bold new approach to backing creators. Moonrise is an early stage equity fund backing people, not projects. We're taking the tools and writing new rules in order to build a better, more inclusive creative economy. With Moonrise Fund, we're focused on new modes of play and making playables for people who want more from their video games.

Through the Founder's Kit, we share a living collection of tools and insights. There's a curated collection of Pitch Decks from developers world-wide, sample business agreements, and information about the business of game design.

The fight for truly equitable environments requires a great deal of time and effort. The needs of creators are constantly evolving as art and technology move forward. Therefore, it requires an abundance of patience, persistence, and commitment to produce equitable results for the future of play.

The GLITCH SBC Board of Directors have reviewed and approved this report.
